

As a Tucson-native, Flagstaff transplant, and current Phoenician, Blaise celebrates the diversity of Arizona, in climate and culture. Blaise is passionate about engaging and empowering partners from all walks of life in creative solution ideation. In the past, Blaise was a founding member of Arizona Deliberates, and has worked with St. Mary's Food Bank Alliance, the Alliance for Innovation, and the City of Goodyear to find real solutions to community issues. Most recently, he served Councilmember Whittaker in the City of Mesa, bridging the Councilmember with City staff, community members, and businesses. Now, Blaise serves his community on the Public Affairs team with Southwest Gas, while volunteering as the with his local legislative district and serving on the Board of Directors for Lifewell.

A graduate of Northern Arizona University ('13) and Arizona State University ('17), Blaise is excited to bring a focused and intentional perspective to partnerships throughout the State he loves so much.
